It is a very happy augury that our University has decided to launch a Quarterly Chronicle. A chronicle serves as a contemporary conspectus of events and developments and usually comprises a significant statements of the events, capabilities and achievements of the organisation, family, city or state being chronicled. Our University is steadily growing in stature and recognition thanks immensely to the leadership, the faculty, the administration and, above all, the students themselves who carry with them evidence of the reputation and excellence of Raffles, wherever they go in their lives. Successive generations of students and faculty will read these chronicles and learn how this University evolved into a magnificent centre of learning and accomplishment. I am given to understand that research publications of Raffles will find mention in the Quarterly Chronicle. I am certain that such mention will encourage and pave the way for better and far reaching fundamental as well as applied research in the days to come. Similarly, the Chronicle will also hopefully record not only events but also progress in the academic credentials of Raffles as well as the achievements of its student and faculty in academia, performing and fine arts, games and nation building by way of an Atmanirbhar Bharat.
